

On March 19, 2020 at 3:32 PM ç <tmleqq@gmail.com> wrote:

To Whom It May Concern:

As an intern at WayCAM, I had the opportunity to receive college credit for my Theatre Arts major at BU. This was a really special opportunity for me, since I was returning to a place that was a big part of my life in high school, but four years later. As an intern at WayCAM, I made video tutorials about how to use all the major equipment in the studio. I used their cameras to film myself using their technology including the cameras, the crane, the lights, and steady cam. I created and edited all these videos in the WayCAM studio, and these videos are now online for students and members to watch before trying out the equipment themselves. I learned a lot about filmmaking through this experience, and am eager to continue my work in film after I graduate this year. If not for WayCAM, I wouldn't have the confidence and experience that I have now, moving forward. Additionally, during my internship I was asked to film a new production of Finding Nemo Junior at Weston Drama Workshop. This is a new musical that Disney was testing out, and they wanted a couple performances to be recorded for them to view. Weston Drama Workshop reached out to WayCAM to film these performances, which resulted in a really cool and rare opportunity for me.

I interned at WayCAM this past summer of 2019 and I am very grateful for my time there, as well as in high school, when I took the Script to Screen class.

Sincerely,
Thomas Leacu